TWINS IN ARMS

THE FIGHTING BROWNS

READING STREET FAMILY'S RECORD

The Reading Street Browns are serving their country 100 per cent.

Father, mother, twin sons and only daughter are represented in the W.V.S., the A.T.S., the Army, the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force.

Mr. W. G. Brown is the oldest established newsagent in Broadstairs, having been in business at Reading Street since 1912.

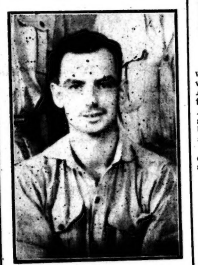
Before volunteering for active service in the last war Mr. Brown served in the Broadstairs Special Constabulary. After the war he resumed service with the constabulary and holds the medal and two bars, representing 24 years as a special.

Transferred from the 3rd Norfolk Regiment, Mr. Brown served in France during the last war with the 9th Essex Regiment. He received multiple wounds during the big push on 8th August, 1918.

Mr. Brown is now back in khaki once again, serving with the Auxiliary Coastguard—which comes under the Royal Navy.

While her husband is away on duty Mrs. Brown carries on the business but still finds time to contribute her quota to the family record of service as a member of Broadstairs W.V.S.

The twin sons, who are 25 years of age, are Ldg. Arm. Dereck George Brown, R.A.F., and Cpl. Stuart Brown, R.A.P.C.



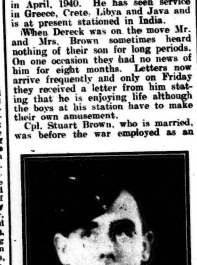
Ldg. Aom. Dereck Brown.

Both boys attended Broadstairs High School. Before volunteering for the Air Force in April, 1939, Dereck had been employed by firms of outfitters at Margate and Broadstairs.

He was drafted to the Middle East in April, 1940. He has since served in Greece, Crete, Libya and Java and is at present stationed in India.

When Dereck was on the move Mr. and Mrs. Brown sometimes heard nothing of their son for long periods. On one occasion they had no news of him for eight months. Letters now arrive frequently and only on Friday they received a letter from him stating that he is enjoying life although the boys at his station have to make their own amusement.

Cpl. Stuart Brown, who is married, was before the war employed as an electrician at Broadstairs by Councillor F. J. Mulpress. He joined the Royal Army Pay Corps in March, 1940, and is serving "somewhere in England."



Cpl. Stuart Brown.

The twins, as babies, were great favourites with the late Lord North cliffe and when he was staying at Elmwood he used to call at the shop every day to see them. He used to call them "The heavenly twins" or "The two little men of Kent." Mr. and Mrs. Brown treasure a number of photographs of the boys signed by Lord Northcliffe.

Another treasured photograph, taken by Lord Northcliffe himself, is of the boys and the Hon. Esmond Harmsworth, now Lord Rothermere.

This picture was published in a number of Lord Northcliffe's newspapers.

Cpl. Elsie Brown is serving with the A.T.S.

She attended Broadstairs High School and St. Joseph's Convent, and for 11 years was on the clerical staff of Messrs. Piggott, of Broadstairs. For a year before the outbreak of war she served as an A.T.S. "Terrier" with a Margate battery of the Royal Artillery and she was mobilised when the Territorial Army was mobilised in August, 1939. She has served on an a-k-ack gun site and was in a heavy blitz on on. of the Midland industrial areas last year.

Cpl. Elsie Brown.

That is the record of the Browns of Reading Street, a record of which any family might justly be proud.

MAY GO TO ARBITRATION

BROADSTAIRS COUNCIL OFFICERS' BONUS

The question of the payment by Broadstairs Council of a war bonus to their officers may go to arbitration.

The report of the Finance Committee, presented at a meeting of the Council on Monday, stated that a letter was received from the National Association of Local Government Officers stating that the continued refusal of the Council to implement the decision of the National Joint Council for Local Authorities' Administrative, Clerical, Professional and Technical Services in the matter of war bonus constituted a dispute under the Conditions of Employment and National Arbitration Order, 1940.

The association pointed out that, although there had been some doubt as to whether that Order applied to all local authorities, the judgment delivered by the House of Lords in "National Association of Local Government Officers v. Mayor, Aldermen and Burgesses of the County Borough of Bolton" put it beyond doubt that either party could refer a dispute to the National Arbitration Tribunal without the consent of the other.

It was further intimated by the association that, while they would much prefer that the dispute should be settled amicably by the Council agreeing to pay the recognised scale of war bonus, the association would have no alternative but to invoke the machinery set up under the 1940 Order, unless this was done.

The committee recommended that consideration of the letter be deferred to the next meeting of the committee and that, in the meantime, the Clerk of the Council be directed to make the copy of the Lords' judgment available to any member of the Council who might desire a perusal of reading it.

The Council adopted the committee's recommendation.

MILITARY BALL SUCCESS

The military ball at the West Cliff Theatre, Ramsgate, on Thursday, was highly successful and attracted nearly 500 dancers.

As a result of the effort the Mayor of Ramsgate's Services Comforts Fund will benefit considerably.

Frederic Hargraves' dance orchestra supplied the music and maintained their reputation for swinging melodious tunes. Mr. Hargraves' reference to the Council's decision to re-elect Alderman A. B. Cox-Sinclair as Mayor was a cue for musical honours and plenty of applause.

The Mayor was accompanied by the Mayoress and told the patrons he would again be proud to be Ramsgate's chief citizen although the job was not all honey and involved a lot of work behind the scenes of which the man in the street knew little. They still had their chins up, however.

SERVED IN SIKH

RAMSGATE SAILOR REPORTED MISSING

Son of Mrs. Hood and the late Mr. Christopher Hood, of Tintagel, Carlton-avenue, Ramsgate, A.C. E.R.A. William Hood, who was serving on H.MS. Sikh, which was lost in the recent raid on Tobruk, has been reported missing.

His father, who was serving as leading-seaman in the Royal Navy, lost his life in September, 1914, when the cruiser H.M.S. Hogue, together with the Cressy and the Aboukir, was sunk.

Mrs. Hood's elder son, Harold, who was a teacher in the service of Ramsgate Education Committee before being called up for the forces, has just reached the Middle East.

SHOCK FOR HOUSEKEEPER

ENGINE DRIVER'S SUDDEN DEATH

A railway engine driver, Mr. Edward Harry Bryant, aged 59 years, died suddenly at his home, 80 Station Approach-road, Ramsgate, on Friday morning.

When he arrived home from work at 2 a.m. Mr. Bryant told his housekeeper, Mrs. Eliza Martha Isnell, that he was not feeling well.

At 8.30 a.m. Mrs. Isnell took a cup of tea to Mr. Bryant's room and found him dead in bed.

Mr. Bryant had been unwell for some time and as death was due to natural causes an inquest was not considered necessary.

SEVEN YEARS IN MIDDLE EAST

SGT. DALTON REPORTED MISSING

Sgt. Glyn Dalton, Royal Corps of Signals, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. Dalton, of 7 Winefred's-avenue, Ramsgate, has been reported missing in the Middle East. He has been in Egypt for nearly seven years, having left England at the end of 1935.

Sgt. Dalton, who is 28 years of age, was born in Wales, but came to Ramsgate when quite young and was educated at Lillian-road School. Before joining the Army he was in the insurance business and was a member of the Salvation Army band.

After being in the Army nearly seven years, Sgt. Dalton's brother Ron fractured his back while serving in India and was brought home by boat and discharged from the Army. When the boat reached Port Said, Glyn met it and went aboard to see his brother. Ron is now engaged on war work.

Sgt. Dalton's father is engaged on A.R.P. work at Ramsgate and his sister Phyllis is a captain in the Salvation Army at Evesham.

THE SECOND FRONT

ALLIED OFFENSIVE IMMINENT

"The 'second front' has become a kind of ferment in every mind, asking and repeating the simple but significant questions—Where? When?" says the Vicar (the Rev. P. M. Townend) in the month's Christ Church, Ramsgate, parish magazine.

"The German offensive in Russia," he says, "has transpired to be a push limited to the southern front alone. They have reached the Caucasus but no oil. They have reached the Volga but have got no Stalingrad and as likely as not at the time of reading it will be the same. The Allied offensive is now imminent, if indeed it has not already begun, for the simultaneous air attack upon Germany both from east and west looks remarkably like the preliminaries, as do also the raids on Dieppe and Tobruk. Our patience and our prayers have been faithfully maintained and said. The third of September gave notable and national expression to the latter upon a scale in numbers and in depth in intensity which was truly both bracing and inspiring."

Mr. Townend wonders whether the unknown path winding its way steadily into the black-out is leading straight into another winter offensive. "Winter offensives," he says, "seem to be the prerogative of the Allies. Germany did not muck it in the east last winter. But she appears to be afraid of it this winter in the west. But how do we know it is not from the south: in the Mediterranean? I expect it is of this that poor Mussolini is thinking. Maybe it will be from the north in the Baltic Sea. In any case, in these days of air attack at sea, with how much less hazard would sea communications be maintained in the black-out. Unpleasant though it is, maybe there is cause after all to welcome the black-out. And if it gives greater safety to the boys in transport who would not suffer any inconvenience or dislike for their sakes?"

NOT CURED YET

MARGATE YOUTH TO RETURN TO BORSTAL

A 17-year-old Margate youth admitted at Margate Quarter Sessions on Friday that he committed nine offences within a week of escaping from a Borstal institution.

He was Leslie Whitehead and was charged with stealing £7 1s. 11d., a silver medal, two fountain pens and two penknives, to the total value of £7 8s. 11d., the property of Margate Education Committee.

Together with another lad named Owen Heard, Whitehead was arrested at Salmestone School, Margate, after spending a night there, and was committed for trial by Margate magistrates, who ordered Heard, whose Borstal detention does not expire until April, 1945, to return to the institution.

Ordering Whitehead to be detained in a Borstal institution for a period not exceeding three years, the Recorder (Mr. R. A. Gordon, K.C.) told him: "Evidently Borstal has not cured you so far."

Phoned For Police.

Miss Dix, who prosecuted, said defendant absconded from a Borstal institution on 2nd September. He committed the offence while at large on the night of 7th-8th September. Mr. Austin, caretaker of Salmestone School, Margate, arrived at the school just before 7 o'clock on the morning of 8th September and noticed that a bucket of water was overturned, cupboard doors were open and other things not as they should be. He then found the defendant and another lad at one of the wash basins. The latter had been dealt with by the magistrates.

The lads said they were having a wash and had been there some ten minutes, continued Miss Dix. Mr. Austin had the wisdom to keep them in conversation for a time and then left them in order to telephone for the police. The other lad slipped out of the building, but Whitehead remained there until police officers arrived. It was found that cupboards had been forced and desks opened, while keys were lying about. The property mentioned in the charge was found in Whitehead's possession. He admitted that he stole them from the school which, he said, they entered at 10.15 the night before through an insecure window.

Absconded Seven Times.

D/I Cory stated that Whitehead was a native of Margate and would be 18 years of age in December. He came under the notice of the police when quite young, being cautioned a number of times for minor offences. He first appeared before the juvenile court at Margate on 28th April, 1937, when a charge of housebreaking was dismissed with a caution. On 4th July he was again before the court for being in need of care and protection, being bound over for a year and placed on probation. On 4th October, 1937, he was before the Cinque Ports juvenile court, Margate, for stealing a pen and was sent to an approved school.

Whitehead absconded on the first occasion from an approved school on March, 1940, was charged at Aldershot juvenile court with shopbreaking, garaging and larceny and was sent to a farm school near Blackpool. He absconded from that school on several occasions and on 15th May, 1940, was charged at Fleetwood with breaking into a cafe and stealing. He was ordered to return to the school but absconded again and on 8th January, 1941, was ordered to be sent to a Borstal institution for two years for escaping from the school.

On 2nd September this year, continued Miss Dix, defendant was released from the institution with another boy and made his way from Nottingham to Margate on a stolen bicycle. On the way he and the other boy committed eight other offences, and he asked the Recorder should take them into consideration. The offences included stealing clothes, candles, night lights, tin of soup, primus stove, plimsols, 480 cigarettes from a shop which he broke into, £4 in money and a watch.

Commissioners' Recommendation.

Whitehead pleaded guilty, but had nothing to say.

The Recorder: I suppose you stole a lot of these things because you came away from Borstal without any money?—Yes, sir.

What did you do with the things?—Most of them were given to the police when we arrived here.

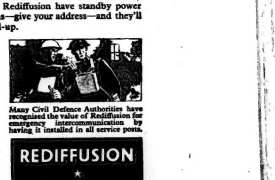
Reply to the Recorder, D/I Cory said Whitehead's period of detention would expire next January. The other boy who was charged with him had a considerable time to serve and was returned to the institution on the recommendation of the Prison Commissioners. Whitehead was committed for trial.

Addressing Whitehead, the Recorder said "You have not started life very well. Borstal evidently has not cured you so far. The only thing I can do with you is to ordeg you to be detained in a Borstal institution for a period not exceeding three years. If you show you are going to behave yourself they may let you out at any time in that period, otherwise you will stay there the whole three years. That is the maximum I can give you."

"You are committed for this opportunity," he continued. "Borstal is not a bad place if you behave yourself. I have visited two Borstal institutions and know something about them. Make friends with the right type of boys and you will improve and come out better than when you went in. Now go back and do your best. I hope they will be able to keep you there this time and not give you a chance to get away."

If you live in a street already wired for Rediffusion you can enjoy its advantages without undue delay. Whilst we cannot extend the development of our service to new areas owing to labour and material shortage, there are many districts connected prior to the war, in which Rediffusion goes down every street. If you live in one of these you can get your broadcast entertainment the Rediffusion way: you can receive important announcements from local authorities; your programmes will continue even if the mains electricity supply should fail because Rediffusion have standby power generators. Call at the showrooms—give your address—and they'll soon tell you if you can be linked-up.

Rediffusion has nothing to go wrong . . . no valves, no batteries, no apparatus, no repairs. That's a big advantage, especially in wartime.



Many Civil Defence Authorities have recognised the value of Rediffusion for emergency intercommunication by having it installed in all service posts.

Loudspeakers are connected by wire direct to B.B.C. microphones. Fading and distortion are unknown. The B.B.C. is virtually on your own doorstep!

ARCHBISHOP AT BROADSTAIRS

IMPLICATION OF THE HARVEST

Two large congregations welcomed the Archbishop of Canterbury (Dr. William Temple) when he visited Broadstairs and St. Peter's on Sunday.

Dr. Temple first preached at sung eucharist at Broadstairs Parish Church and then continued to St. Peter's, where he gave an appropriate sermon on the occasion of the harvest festival. Large crowds were gathered outside the church when he arrived and left.

The Chairman (Councillor B. J. Pearson) and representatives of Broadstairs Council attended the service at St. Peter's.

Choosing for his sermon at St. Peter's the appropriate text "Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," the Archbishop said many lessons could be gained from the harvest which figured in parables both in the teachings of the Lord and his apostles.

They talked of the acts of God—that term was included in insurance policies—and His workings were strange and mysterious. An act of God meant something imperceptible. Thunderstorms were in the old days attributed to the work of God but science had gradually been explaining things in terms of the natural law which governed them. It seemed that the era of God's antiquity had been reduced but he wanted to point out that science only showed us how God worked.

God at Work.

The Lord always pointed them to the regular reliable processes of nature to see God at work. They could not just see His work here and there and have recourse to Him only when they could not explain things in any other way. In an age in which sense of the rigidity of law in the natural field was rapidly gaining ground there was a curious unwillingness to recognise the Lord's work in the affairs of man. Those people who had not given over their minds to materialistic determinism—and there were very few people in church who had—seemed to think they had a degree of freedom of control over their lives for which the Bible gave no moral whatever. But if they used that freedom of thought in one way or another would suddenly switch it over to use in another way. They were bound by the chains of their own choice—God was not mocked.

If there was to be a harvest there must be also a preparation of the soil. They could not suppose it would be in their power to start leading Christ-like lives in a day or neglect God for the greater part of the time and then suddenly fall to prayer because they felt they needed Him. Such lives could only be built up slowly by perpetual practice.

A Free Choice.

One of the worst factors of wrongdoings, said Dr. Temple, was that when they had once been done they did not appear quite so bad unless they had been repeated to some passing weakness at which their nature revolted. The effect of wrongdoing was like falling over a precipice. Once they had fallen they had no choice as to whether they would reach the bottom or not. Those they could not suddenly stop the unhappiness they had caused to other people.

"But that does not mean," continued the Archbishop, "that we are in the grip of some system that holds us like a vice and from which we cannot turn this way or that." On the other hand it did not mean that when they had asked God's forgiveness they could have things just the same as they were before. There was a great difference between good men and bad men but the greatest difference was between the penitent and the non-penitent. If a man wronged another and afterwards owned up the friendship of the two was usually increased—and they could thus turn their wrongdoings into blessings. But they could not expect to have their sins banished simply by asking God's forgiveness.

The service was conducted by the curate-in-charge (the Rev. R. D. d'E. Meredith) and the choir was augmented by choristers from St. George's Church, Ramsgate.

ABSENT JUROR

At Margate Quarter Sessions on Friday the Recorder (Mr. R. A. Gordon, K.C.) announced that an absent juror named George Pruin would be fined £5 unless he could give a proper explanation of his failure to attend.

As in the only case down for hearing the defendant pleaded guilty, the services of the jury were not required but the Recorder told them he hoped they did not feel that their time had been altogether wasted.

"You have been brought into another kind of atmosphere," he said, "although it is only a legal one, which is supposed to be rather dull. You have also had the opportunity of meeting fellow burgesses."

The Doctor says—

THIS IS THE WAY TO GO TO SLEEP

When into bed at night you creep
And find it hard to fall asleep, your thoughts go round and round and round,
you're furious at the slightest sound.
Remember these things you can do:
some may suit me and some suit you.

First, make a break, relax the mind, in any way you feel inclined, some time before you "hit the hay."
game of cards, some quiet books, a walk, a talk—but not on spooks!—this stops the worries of the day.

Care can't kill cats, but may harm
you, so think out clearly what to do, in anything that's worrying you.
put it right outside your brain and do not think of it again.

A bath at night helps you relax and cease to think of income tax, but not too hot—that just excites—and don't forget to douse the lights before you pull the curtain back; it may be fresh air that you lack.

Hot drinks—a glass of milk—help
some, but not an overloaded " tum."
To sleep or not to sleep's the question, but no one sleeps with indigestion.

THE FOOD FRONT

IT'S ALL FISH THAT COMES TO THE NET

Women who have learned in their own busy lives the value of wise planning will be the first to appreciate the new scheme of fish distribution, whereby much labour and transport will be saved. This will be done by the fish, within a certain radius of where it is landed instead of playing general post with it to suit regional tastes, as hitherto.

In many instances, that unfamiliar varieties will appear in our fish shops. But the housewife, the sensible woman that she is, will gladly take what her fishmonger has been allocated although she may at first wonder how to cook it, or even think it cannot be as nourishing or as appetising as that to which she is accustomed.

There is no need for her to hesitate. The nutritive and body-building values of these fish with the strange names are just as high as those of her old favourites.

As for cooking, they are most adaptable and all can be cooked in the familiar ways.

Take skate, for example. It is very like cod, but the flakes are larger and firmer and the flesh is darker.

Ling is very good, too; it is another member of the cod family but its texture is firmer than that of cod, and it is inclined to be dry. Therefore be keep it moist when cooking it.

Rock salmon or catfish is easily recognisable by its firm pink and white flesh. Fishermen say that it is one of the sweetest fish that comes out of the sea, and when you have tried it you will agree. It makes lovely fish pies and fishcakes and is delicious grilled with just a little dripping.

The recipes given below are good examples of interchangeable dishes for they can be used for any white fish that is available in your district.

Rock Salmon and Apple.

1½ lbs. of rock salmon
1 lb. of cooking apples
1 lb. of parboiled potatoes
1 pint of white sauce
1 teaspoonful of vinegar
1 teaspoonful of mixed spice
Browned crumbs
Seasoning

Cut the fish into thin. thick slices. Put the fish, peeled, sliced apples and potatoes in a fireproof dish, finishing with a layer of apples. Add the vinegar, spice and seasoning to the white sauce, pour into the dish, scatter crumbs over and bake in a moderate oven for 30 minutes.

Saithe Hot Pot.

2 lbs. of saithe
2 lbs. of potatoes
1 lb. of carrots and swedes
1 onion
1 oz. of dripping
Milk
Salt, pepper, nutmeg

Cut the saithe into pieces. Slice and parboil the vegetables. Place fish and vegetables in layers in a fireproof dish, season well. Pour in enough milk almost to cover the ingredients, finishing with pieces of dripping and bake for 2 hour in a moderate oven.

Ling with Bacon.

1½ lbs. of ling filleted
4 rashers of bacon
Seasoning
Small forcemeat balls

Cut the fish into portions, season well. Lay in a greased baking tin, and lay the bacon, and put in the forcemeat balls if liked. Bake in a moderate oven until the fish is done and the bacon crisp.

PRISONERS IN ITALY

Sgt. George Laidler, son of Mrs. Laidler, of Farm-cottages, Reading Street, is a prisoner of war in Italy. He had been reported missing since 29th June.

Mrs. Laidler has received a card from him in which he states that he was captured at Mersa Matruh, but is fairly well.

Coming of a military family, Sgt. Laidler was transferred to the Duke of York's School, Dover, and trained as an artificer at the Military College of Science, Woolwich. He joined the regular Army in 1932 and was later drafted to India. He had been in the Middle East for about 18 months.

Pte. Ernest E. Kennett, The Buffs, formerly of Margate, is also known to be a prisoner in Italy. Twenty-two years of age, he joined the Army two years ago after being employed as a plasterer. Two months ago he was sent to the Middle East.

THIS WEEK'S SHORT STORY

DRIVEN TO IT

BY

CHARLES HATTON

Jacob Anlaby stuck the stamp neatly in the top right-hand corner of the long envelope. Then he shuffled across the floor to the Post Office, and pushed it into the postbox.

"That's put paid to brother Lucas," he chuckled hoarsely. For the envelope contained his will, with no reference to his brother. Jacob had been intending to take this step for some time—ever since Lucas had persuaded him to buy those shares in a Cornish tin mine that proved singularly innocent of any ore.

As he turned from the posting box, Jacob paused. A man was standing, at the ledge reserved for people to write letters and telegrams. He was busy addressing an envelope; and wore a raincoat with the collar turned up and a soft felt hat with the brim pulled well down over his eyes. There was something ostentatious about his deliberate manner that made Jacob hesitate and peer over his shoulder. The man did not appear to notice him.

Jacob shook a little uncertainly. Then he leaned forward as much as he dared to see the writing better. It was addressed to—

Jacob Anlaby, Esq.,
18 Thurslow Square,
London, W.9.

Jacob cleared his throat and shifted his feet.

"Excuse me," he said at last, "I think that letter is for me."

The man swung round abruptly.

"Who are you?" he snapped.

"Jacob Anlaby."

"Oh, no, you're not," he replied after a pause. "You're not Jacob Anlaby. Why, I know him as well as my own brother."

"But I tell you——" Jacob began.

"I know what your game is," cut in the other. "Thought you'd get that letter out of me. Guessed there was something pretty valuable in it, didn't you? I've a jolly good mind to call the police."

"You can please yourself about that," retorted Jacob. "I can soon prove who I am, and if you post that letter I shall get it back."

"We'll see about that," snarled the other. "Anway, you clear out, and stop mistering me."

Unconsciously, they had raised their voices, and several people were watching them with undisguised curiosity. Jacob felt the colour mounting to his face.

He did not answer the last remark, but gave a shrug and walked out of the office. "To blazes with him," he muttered.

Nevertheless, the incident annoyed him, all the way home. He sat in the bus speculating on what he'd done to merit it, and by the time he got home had quite convinced himself that the man was an unnecessary luxury in London.

As soon as he got home he rang for Dowty, his male servant, a dour Yorkshireman who had long been in his employ.

With his back to the mantelpiece, Jacob thrust his hands deep into his old-fashioned fob pockets that he still favoured.

"Dowty," he said, "I've put you back in my will."

Dowty appeared quite unmoved.

"Very good, Mr. Anlaby," he replied without a trace of emotion. This irritated his employer.

"Don't you want to know how much?" Jacob asked incredulously. Dowty's rugged Yorkshire features still remained inscrutable.

"It won't be one of these days, if ye live longer'n me. Ye'll find yourself a hundred pounds better off. There! What d'ye think of that?"

"Thank you very much, Mr. Anlaby," replied Dowty woodenly. But this did not satisfy his master, who had apparently expected greater enthusiasm.

"I know—ye're thinking it's not enough. Ye're thinking that because ye've been in my spy so long I ought to leave you half my fortune. But that's where ye're wrong. Blood's thicker'n water. My money goes to my sister Sarah's boy, William. He's a good, steady lad."

"But what about Mr. Lucas, sir?"

"Lucas!" screamed Anlaby. "Don't mention that crook's name in this house. Not one penny of my money does he get."

"No, sir, I see what you mean, sir," replied Dowty, smoothly. "Shall I bring your supper in now?"

"Oh, go to blazes!"

Anlaby tore off his hat and threw it aside, shed his coat and kicked it under the table, and flung his stick to the floor. Dowty gathered up each article with consummate dignity and discreetly withdrew.

A Shock.

Skimming rapidly through his letters the following morning, Anlaby sought eagerly for the envelope he had seen being addressed to him in the Strand office. It was not there. Nor did it appear in the second post. In fact, it did not arrive at all that day. Anlaby was rather puzzled. He could only conclude that the man had decided not to post the letter after all.

After lunch, Anlaby went into the City to transact some business. As he was leaving the office, a short, thick-set man, wearing a blue overcoat and a bowler, bumped into him.

"Can't you look where you're going?" growled Anlaby.

"I knew that voice!" cried the other man in hearty tones. "Why, of course, it's Dodds! How are you getting on, old man?"

"My name is not Dodds," snapped Anlaby.

The other man was obviously startled.

"Look here, Dodds, old man, if this is one of your little jokes——"

"I am not your friend Dodds, and this is far from a joke," roared Anlaby. He made to move on, but the other man barred his way. Light seemed to have dawned upon him.

"I know what it is, Dodds," he persisted. "You can't pay me back that quid! Now,don't let that worry you, old boy. Any time will do."

"For the last time," roared Anlaby, "my name is not Dodds, and I do not owe any man a penny. Now will you get out of my way?"

The man thrust his hands in his overcoat pockets with an injured air. "That's gratitude for you," he muttered to a couple of spectators.

Mr. Anlaby walked to Charing Cross and from there hurried home.

Dowty opened the door to him. The man cleared his throat rather nervously as he always did when he had some message about which he was a little dubious.

"A fellow called about an hour ago, Mr. Anlaby. He said he wanted to see Mr. Snelling."

"Snelling," grunted Anlaby. "Who's Snelling?"

"I told him there was no one of that name here, but he insisted. So I asked him to describe this Snelling, and he came the funny part. 'Oh, you know. He have a description of you, sir.'"

"Me?"

"Yes, sir. There couldn't be any mistake. I wondered if you'd had some business transaction with him, and had given him that name for private reasons——"

Mr. Anlaby snorted.

"And can you get those ideas out of your head. I've never been ashamed to do business under my own name. And if he calls again, kick him down the front steps!"

But Anlaby was by no means so assured by the small hours of the night, as he lay awake calling to mind every detail of these queer encounters. He failed to see what the two strange men ten pounds each.

"There you are, boys: I told you we'd work the oracle," he declared gaily.

"Well, I must say you two earned it," commented the latter. "I never saw so many get-ups in all my life. Why, I didn't even know you myself at times."

"All in the game," replied the taller of the two with a wink.

"Yes, and the lesser fees," said his companion. "Plenty of time to change, and no audience getting restless."

When they had gone, Lucas tossed a couple of banknotes to Dowty, who fingered them lovingly.

"Think it's safe to trust those two, Mr. Lucas?" he asked.

Lucas shrugged. "Why not?"

"There's such a thing as blackmail."

"Pah! They'll drink themselves to death in a couple of years. You know what actors are!" He rose and fastened his overcoat.

"I'm just going round to Jacob's bank. See you later."

After he had read the solicitor's letter of introduction, Jacob's bank manager excused himself and went to consult a ledger.

"I'm afraid there is rather a disappointment in store for you, Mr. Anlaby," he began gravely.

Lucas sat up stiffly in his chair.

"Perhaps," went on the manager, "you may not wish to hear your brother succumbed to a temptation which besets most of us at times. He did a little gambling on the Stock Exchange. He bought a large number of shares in a company of very dubious standing. The capital was not paid up, and there have been several calls on the shares which have made great inroads on his resources. There is a final call due shortly, but we may rescue a few hundreds for you."

Lucas licked his lips.

"There is more," he whispered hoarsely, "what's the name of 'em?"

The manager smiled.

"North Cornwall Tin Mines." he replied.

R.A.F.—W.A.A.F.

As so many cannot call during the week, the R.A.F. Recruiting Officer from the Chatham Recruiting Office is paying a visit to the A.T.C. headquarters, Chatham House, Ramsgate, on Sunday, 11th October, from 10.30. to 12.30.

occasions. First by a seedy individual with a whining voice, who insisted on calling him Harold, and then by a portly man who apparently mistook him for somebody on the Stock Exchange.

When he got home, Dowty was again awaiting his arrival in some anxiety to tell him how another mysterious caller had wished him as a Mr. Fanshawe, of Potters Bar.

So the strange persecution continued. Some days Mr. Anlaby was stopped as many as five times, on others only once or twice. The men who spoke to him came from all spheres of life. Some wore the spats and striped trousers which betokened City interests; others were dressed carelessly in the flannels and pullovers of the artistic type. Some had their eyes on and were unshaven. Yet when he refuted their challenges they offered apologies. Sometimes they argued a little vaguely; often they walked quietly away.

By this time all sorts of wild theories were chasing through Anlaby's mind. Could it be something to do with reincarnation? Or had he had some sort of double life? He could not credit this, for he could remember all the details of his daily routine for months past without much difficulty.

He did not relate these strange happenings to anyone else, for he had always been a lonely man, and it was his nature to brood upon his problems. But the business was preying on his mind. He went out less frequently, and when in the City he slunk through the crowds like an escaping criminal.

This state of affairs had been in existence about a fortnight when he was stopped one day in a cul-de-sac off the Strand by a policeman.

"We want you, Baxter, for the Hampstead job."

Anlaby was about to begin his usual protest when a thought struck him.

Can you prove I'm Baxter?" he demanded quickly.

"If you're not Harry Baxter, then I'm Charlie Peace," replied the constable. "But we'll soon check up on your fingerprints. Come on, now."

Half an hour before Anlaby had Anlaby away, another man who looked like an inspector in plain clothes came up to them and called the constable aside for a minute. They talked in undertones, and at length the plain clothes man turned to Anlaby.

"All right, Baxter—your alibi lets you out this time," he said with a wry smile.

The next morning Jacob Anlaby was found hanging from the canopy of his four-poster bed.

The Actors' Part.

Lucas Anlaby leaned his stick against the table and gently lowered himself into the chair his solicitor hastened to offer him.

"I'm glad to congratulate you, Burns, on the way you handled my little case," he smiled, expansively.

The solicitor shrugged deprecatingly.

"It was obvious, Mr. Anlaby, that your poor brother was not himself. Any judge would have had to ignore that will, and the estate quite rightly reverts to you."

Lucas nodded sadly, and after a decent interval asked:

"Could you oblige me with fifty pounds until the estate is settled?"

"Why certainly, Mr. Anlaby."

The solicitor walked to his desk presently returned with the money. Lucas thrust it carelessly into his pocket, took a receipt, and then paused significantly.

"I suppose you have no idea of my brother's financial position?"

The solicitor rubbed his hands.

"Mr. Anlaby never confided in us to that extent. I have only given you a note to the manager of the Central Bank, where he kept his account."

Lucas accepted that. Then presently he bade the solicitor good morning.

Outside the office he called a taxi and drove to an alley off Charing Cross-road, where there was a public-house much frequented by members of the theatrical profession. He made his way at once to a private lounge, where three men were sitting round the fire.

"Here's the guv'nor now," said Dowty, as Lucas entered.

Without much preamble Lucas flashed the bundle of notes out of his pocket, while the two strange men ten pounds each.

"There you are, boys: I told you we'd work the oracle," he declared gaily.

"Well, I must say you two earned it," commented the latter. "I never saw so many get-ups in all my life. Why, I didn't even know you myself at times."

WAR-TIME SCOUTING

There is so much news for this month's Scout Column that I am afraid only the more important items can rightly claim the fuller report. But that means a state of very healthy activity in Scouting locally.

The War Service Patrols Training Camp held up in the Betteshanger woods was something that even the sturdy scout in his will remember for its vigour. Faversham, Deal, Canterbury, Sandwich and East Kent sent nearly 40 picked Scouts. Those daytime stunts with full pack made one rather uncomfortably warm, while the night downpour gave ample cooling down variety. A Scouter padre conducted early service on Sunday morning. A three-mile run gave an excellent appetite for breakfast, while after meals maps were made with the box compass and wide ruler with the end sights fitted. Our own D.C. was in his element in charge of the knotting and pioneering. The 50ft. rope bridge was used later in what Scouts call the Commando obstacle race, which included rope climbing, and passing through a dense smoke screen with full pack. After tea on Saturday the County Commissioner, who had come down specially from Chislehurst, gave his own comments on the proceedings. He said, had produced better patrol leaders than other parts of the county, but, Brig.-Gen. Clark said that rope climbing and pioneering was decidedly the weakest part of the programme in all the four county camps. Finally the Field Commissioner, Mr. Jack Durgan, M.M., of Northumberland, gave his summing up, and the camp closed with the Scout's call and chorus. We reached Ramsgate just before 7.30 p.m., having spent a week-end that will not be remembered but cheerfully in the following two days as far as loosening muscles were concerned.

As forecast in our last column, our local association pow-wow on the Commissioner's report on post-war Scouting took place. About 30 representatives of Scouters, Cubbers and Patrol Leaders took part and were addressed by Leader of the movement. The D.C. presided and the A.D.C. acted as secretary in the discussions. The proposals that are required by the County Commissioner.

In the main features the report met with general unanimous acceptance and the wide vision of those who have done such good service by their comments and suggestions for the problems that will have to be faced is to be warmly commended.

Badges are due for some alteration. It is suggested that all technical badges should be examined by a Board of Scouters and examiners, leaving Scouters free with only the Scouting badges like pioneering, tracking. Wolf Cub badges like star signs of the first class badge before trying to secure a wide range of proficiency badges, it is felt that it is limited to six badges until he gains his first class. When a Cub goes up into the Scouts he gets his Cub badges, as all similar Scout badges are of a considerably higher standard of a hievement. If a Cub reaches his 2nd star stage to show that he has gained good Cub experience, he may be awarded a leaping Wolf Cub badge which he may wear until he has won his 2nd class Scout badge. It is perhaps only natural that a Cub who has his 2nd star and six badges feels "cold" when he becomes a Scout without any proficiency badges at all. Similarly it is suggested that a King's Scout should be allowed to wear this badge when he goes up into the Rovers.

Closer co-operation between the Scouts and Guides is looked for. Although the Guides are a sister movement, with policy, organisation and rules very much akin to our own, they have little contact. With problems locally much the same for both of us, it is to be hoped that, say, a joint quarterly meeting takes place for Scouters and Guiders, when such interchange of training as would benefit both boys and girls will be arranged. The boys could show the Guides how to fit up morse buzzers and keys, while in return Scouts would benefit from a little practical cooking advice from the girls.

There were other important items that concern mainly the Scouter, such as the size of troops and the number in a group. The suggested size of 100 in a group might be divided approximately between say five or six patrols (each with eight Scouts), and 35 or 40 Cubs, with larger Rover crews. Local conditions, however, must be the final factor. Personally I think that locally the number in each group is more likely to average round about 60.

In view of the shortage of technical instructors, it might be possible to work in pairs—a number of troops to share the same instructor, and save man-power. There, I am afraid, we must leave the report for the moment, although this does little justice to it.

. . . .

The Cubmaster, Miss L. Powell, and the Asst. Cubmaster, Miss J. Dubery, of the Ramsgate Composite Group, both received their warrants and badges from the District Commissioner earlier the same evening as the Cubbers' Own. Both Cubbers are serving in the W.R.N.S. The Cubs were there in good array.

. . . .

The following appointments are made for proficiency badge examinations:

2nd Class—J. Clements (Ramsgate Composite), F. Sawtell (1st. St. Lawrence).

Basketworker—P. Easton (6th Ramsgate).

Pathfinder—J. Beadle, and R. Mannings (1st St. Lawrence).

Marksman—R. Mannings (1st St. Lawrence).

. . . .

A course of instruction for the fireman's badge has been arranged to take place at Thanet-road N.F.S. station, commencing on Wednesday, 14th October, at 7.15 p.m. The number from the association is limited to 12 Scouts (over 15), and names should be sent in to the A.D.C. by each group immediately. Uniform must be worn.

. . . .

Camp Report.—Through the courtesy of S/Sr. Jack Goodman, of the 1st Bishopsbourne Troop, who placed his headquarters at the disposal of the Ramsgate Central Composite Group, the Scouts were able to spend a long week-end at Bishopsbourne, in spite of the ban on tents. It was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone. This headquarters, built mainly by the Scouts themselves on the exact lines of a Canadian lumber cabin with log walls, shingle roof and huge open brick fireplace, presented a Scouty atmosphere throughout the camp. As timber was plentiful, the opportunity was well used for forestry and a number of shelf troop can claim to be quite young experts with a felling axe. Saturday night was given up to a real bonfire sing-song and makes one of the happiest memories of the time. Thanks are due to Sr. Jack Goodman for his cooperation. Due to the way they solved the food problem between them, rationing seemed a thing of the past.

AMBULANCE STAFF OFFICER'S APPOINTMENT TERMINATED

On the recommendation of the Civil Defence Committee, Ramsgate Town Council have decided to terminate the appointment of Mr. E. E. Waters as ambulance staff officer.

With the approval of the Ministry of Health, Mr. Waters was appointed ambulance staff officer at a remuneration of £5 10s. per week as from 1st January, 1941, for the purpose of undertaking various duties of a supervisory nature in connection with the casualty service.

In view of the substantial depletion of personnel in the casualty service, the committee considers the necessity for the continuation of the appointment and came to the conclusion that it should no longer be maintained especially in view of the recent reorganisation of the casualty service and the appointment of depot superintendents, who act in a supervisory capacity.

The report of the committee, presented at a meeting of the Council on Thursday, continued:

"The Council are reminded of the very valuable services which Mr. Waters performed voluntarily prior to and following the outbreak of war in the organisation and training of the casualty service personnel, and the committee regret that circumstances have now changed to prevent present arrangements, but the committee desire that steps shall be taken as soon as possible to find Mr. Waters employment on the establishment of the Council as soon as opportunity arises."

The committee recommended that Mr. Waters' appointment be determined by a month's notice to expire on 31st October.

The recommendation was adopted.

DEFERMENTS SOUGHT

FOR COUNCIL OFFICERS

The report of the Works Committee presented at a meeting of Ramsgate Town Council on Thursday stated that Mr. E. S. Hole, Deputy Borough Surveyor,/ became de-reserved on 1st October and that application had been made for his deferment for a long as possible in view of the nature of his duties, which were largely concerned with Civil Defence, and the fact that Mr. Hole was the only remaining fully qualified technical member of the Borough Engineer's staff.

The Borough Treasurer (Mr. H. Oliver Jones) reported to the Finance Committee that a notice had been received from the Ministry of Health to the effect that the decision of the Ministry of Labour and National Service on the application for the deferment of Mr. E. H. Clarke was that the calling up be deferred until 30th November, after which date he must be regarded as available for calling up.

The Borough Treasurer informed the committee that the trained staff of his department had now been reduced to an absolute minimum and that if Mr. Clarke was called up it would be impossible to maintain even the existing standard of work in the department and serious consequences might result. The committee recommended that the Town Clerk and the Borough Treasurer be authorised to take all possible steps to obtain a further deferment in respect of Mr. Clarke.

The Council concurred in the recommendation.

LINEN FOR RUSSIA

Russia's hospitals are in urgent need of bed linen and Mrs. Henry Martin, chairman of the Comforts Fund for Women and Children of the Soviet Union, has appealed to British housewives to send sheets and pillow cases. Ramsgate W.V.S. will accept the responsibility of receiving and dispatching any linen which may be sent to the headquarters at 14 Effingham-street. The linen will be received on Monday and Friday between 2.30 and 4.30 p.m. and on Wednesday between 10 a.m. and 12 noon.

YOUR BEST DEFENCE AGAINST INFECTION

DISINFECTION combined with cleanliness is the best safeguard against infection. A simple means of ensuring general disinfection is to add a tablespoonful of JEYES' FLUID to every gallon of water used for cleansing. Used in this way, especially on floors to prevent the rising of germ-laden dust, JEYES' FLUID kills germs and creates hygienic surroundings which form a barrier to infection.

PETROL SUB-COMMITTEE'S GOOD WORK

The sub-committee of Ramsgate Civil Defence Committee appointed to investigate and report on the consumption of petrol by C.D. vehicles, have decided that it is possible to have too much of a good thing.

The sub-committee have done a good job of work and since they began their investigations there has been a considerable reduction in the amount of petrol consumed.

The fourth report of the sub-committee, presented at a meeting of the Town Council on Thursday, stated:

"The sub-committee are of the opinion that the time and labour involved in examining each log book separately and checking the uses to which each vehicle has been put are not justified as long as the cost of petrol consumption does not vary considerably from the amounts shown in the tables of statistics for the months of July and August, and they therefore recommend that the sub-committee discontinue monthly meetings and the examination in detail of log books and reports relating to the consumption of petrol and the use of vehicles until such time as circumstances arise which in their opinion make the resumption of such action on their part necessary."

The Council approved the recommendation.

The above is an extract from a letter to his mother at Margate by a prisoner of war in Germany.

STORING THE NATION'S IRON RATION

Germany had to cut her potato ration by half this summer. For some days during July both Hamburg and Rotterdam were entirely without supplies. Potatoes are our national insurance. Our farmers have increased their potato acreage by 70 per cent. and they have been asked for a further 30 per cent. increase next year. But it is not enough to grow greater supplies. They must be stored safely. Much loss has occurred in the past owing to bad storage. This must not happen again, or the nation's "iron ration" will be jeopardised.

Most farmers will be storing potatoes out of doors in clamps—or pies or "graves" as they are called in some parts. Clamp sites should be level and near good roads. The clamp base varies in width according to district. The Farmer's War Agricultural Committee will tell him the best width for the district. Clamps are shaped like an inverted "V." Sides and ridge must be even when the pile is finished and all hollow must be avoided.

The heap is thatched with a 6 to 8 inch layer of straw or straw, firmly packed and running from top to bottom. A spit of soil can be put here and there to keep the straw in place. The ridge is made weather-proof with a separate thatch. The clamp is left for a week or ten days to allow for "sweating." Then an 8 inch layer of soil is put over the straw, but the ridge is left free for the present. It is made 6 inches wide, running from base to ridge, are also left free from soil every 4 yards to permit ventilation. These strips are filled a fortnight later, still leaving the ridge open. The soil covering is dug from a trench alongside the clamp, leaving a ledge 2 feet wide all round the clamp as a base for the covering soil. Make sure that rain-water drains away from the clamp.

As soon as frost is likely, a further 4 inches of soil is added. The ridge can be left a little time longer, but as soon as frost comes the ridge should be covered with soil or a heavy layer of straw. Rotted bracken should not be used instead.

For further protection in prolonged and severe frost, a layer of strawy manure or hedge trimmings may be put on the clamp. If the potatoes have not been sold by early spring, the manure and straw should be removed, and a little later, part of the soil from the ridge.

Potatoes may be stored in dry, frost-proof sheds, but the stack height should not exceed about 5 feet. All light must be excluded from the tubers, and the heaps must be well covered with straw or

SERVING THE LONDON ROAD

RAMSGATE BUS SERVICE VARIATIONS

Bus services in Ramsgate are to be varied in order to provide facilities for people living on the London-road between Grange-road and Nethercourt-hill.

The report of the Watch Committee, presented at a meeting of Ramsgate Town Council on Thursday, stated that a letter had been received from the Regional Transport Commissioner, intimating that he had received a petition from a number of Ramsgate residents seeking omnibus facilities through London-road, which lies between Grange-road and Nethercourt-hill.

The Commissioner felt that there was some merit in the suggestion and he was advised that the best course for adoption would be to divert services Nos. 66 and 87 (Ramsgate to Sandwich, Deal and Dover, and vice versa) via London-road and Nethercourt-circus instead of via Grange-road and St. Lawrence. Such diversion would provide 16 journeys daily in each direction along London-road and the Commissioner pointed out that although the diversion would doubtless cause some inconvenience to residents of the St. Lawrence Church district, this locality would still be served by services Nos. 9 and 10 (Ramsgate-Manston, Minster and Canterbury, and vice versa), which operate approximately every hour throughout the day.

It had also been suggested to the Commissioner that services Nos. 49 and 49a should also be diverted via Nethercourt-circus but he was satisfied that to do so would cause serious complications and on Thursday the Watch Committee received from the National Savings Committee an intimation that the regional target had been reached and the bonds been oversubscribed, as regarded as having reached their objective. This had the effect of reducing the target figure by £29,499 and the amount actually subscribed after deducting the bonds was £30,746. Margate has therefore exceeded its objective by a narrow margin.

The amount saved comprised savings certificates £15,300 and net deposits in the Post Office savings bank £15,356. Defence bonds during the campaign represented a figure of £5,133.

The campaign ended on Saturday and its most encouraging feature was the effort of the savings groups. They were asked to subscribe £3,461 5s. but more than doubled that amount, their savings in the ten weeks totalling £7,729 9s. 6d. During the last week, when a special appeal was made to them to convert their savings groups into certificates or pay them into the savings bank, a total of £2,632 3s. 9d. was invested. Of this sum the groups in Park Ward alone contributed £1,118 12s.

The ten wards in the borough were each given a target for their combined groups and all objectives were well exceeded with one exception. The ward figures were: Birchington (target £500), £1,181 8s.; Cecil (£264 4s. 11d.), £795 6s. 5d.; Cliftonville (£333 6s. 6d.), £926 16s. 6d.; Ethelbert (£316 11s. 7d.), £458 12s. 6d.; Marine (£416 0s. 3d.), £545 2s. 10d.; Park (£537 3s. 4d.), £2,028 13s. 6d.; Pier (£152 14s. 2d.), £318 1s.; Salmestone (£357 3s. 7d.), £558 19s. 6d.; Thanet (£316 8s. 8d.), £282; Westgate (£300), £665 9s.

Since January, 1940, Margate has saved and lent to the Government a total of £801,935.

TOBRUK RAID

MARGATE SAILOR MISSING

Following the recent raid on Tobruk, Tel. Sidney Edward Warren, R.N., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Warren, of 69 All Saints'-road, Margate, serving aboard an M.T.B. which ran aground, has been reported missing.

A few days before receiving the official notification that he was missing, Mrs. Warren received a letter from her son dated 5th September saying he was safe and well.

Tel. Warren, an old boy of New Cross-street School, joined the Navy in 1938. He helped to assist in the evacuation of the B.E.F. from Dunkirk and last year was serving on a ship which was torpedoed in the Atlantic.

SAVED HER SON

MARGATE WOMAN KILLED IN FIRE

Falling 35ft. from the window of her flat to the pavement below, Mrs. Ann Marjorie Lawes, wife of Mr. George Lawes, formerly of 5 Mill-lanes, Margate, lost her life as a result of a fire at Cheltenham last week.

Mrs. Lawes and her 10-year-old son were trapped when fire broke out in a large building in which Mrs. Lawes occupied a flat.

By knotting sheets together she made a rope and lowered her son to safety. Mrs. Lawes then either jumped or fell from the window and sustained injuries which resulted in her death in hospital the same evening.

From another window an airman, his wife and three small children reached safety by jumping into a blanket held by a Home Guard and neighbours.

Thirty-nine years of age, Mrs. Lawes was a native of Gillingham. She met her husband in Margate and they were married about 15 years ago. The family left Margate two years ago when Mr. Lawes, a driver employed by the East Kent Road Car Co., was stationed at Cheltenham as a driver on the Cheltenham-London services. Recently Mr. Lawes was transferred to London and was away from Cheltenham at the time of the tragedy.

Mrs. Lawes was buried at Margate Cemetery on Friday.

INTERNED IN MANILA

NEWS OF MARGATE COUNCILLOR'S SON

News has been received that Mr. Gerald H. Pedder, son of Councillor and Mrs. H. G. Pedder, of 41 Windsor-avenue, Margate, is interned at Santo Tomas internment camp, Manila.

The news, which comes via the Foreign Office from Japanese official sources in the Philippines, is the first Councillor and Mrs. Pedder have had of their son for 12 months.

An old boy of Chatham House School, Ramsgate, Mr. Pedder, who is 32 years of age, went to the Philippines in 1933 when he took up a position with a firm of sugar and rice factors at Manila. He opened a new branch for the firm at Bacolod and was due to come home on leave in November, 1939. Owing to the outbreak of war he returned to Manila and became a temporary member of the staff of the British Consul-General as passport officer.

REVISED TARGET REACHED

CHURCHILL TANKS TO BEAR MARGATE'S NAME

Margate's "Tanks for Attack" campaign has succeeded and the name of the town will be inscribed on two Churchill tanks.

Each tank will also bear the names of three savings groups as they have already been decided that the town's elementary schools shall be one of the groups to have their names inscribed.

Included in the amounts of the St. Lawrence Church district, this locality would still be served by services Nos. 9 and 10 (Ramsgate-Manston, Minster and Canterbury, and vice versa), which operate approximately every hour throughout the day.

It had also been suggested to the Commissioner that services Nos. 49 and 49a should also be diverted via Nethercourt-circus but he was satisfied that to do so would cause serious complications with regard to the running times of these services, consequent upon the additional mileage involved.

Before authorising the East Kent Road Car Co. to put the proposed diversion along the London-road into effect, the Commissioner has asked whether the Council had any observations to make in the matter.

It was decided to inform the Commissioner that the Council welcomed the proposed diversion of services Nos. 66 and 87.

At an earlier meeting the committee received a letter stating that after careful consideration the general manager of the East Kent Road Car Co. was of the opinion that the diversion of certain buses on the Ramsgate-Margate service along Newington-road and Whitehall-road to provide a bus service in the Newington district would not be in the interests of the general public.

HARDY FAMILY AGAIN

WOMEN IN WAR AT KING'S

More hilarious adventures of a popular screen family are seen in "The Courtship of Andy Hardy," which is being screened at King's Theatre, Ramsgate, to-day and to-morrow.

Mickey Rooney is, of course, the inimitable, precocious Andy and he was never better than in this screamingly funny story of his romance with the screen's new charmer, Donna Reed. Lewis Stone appears once again as the head of the Hardy family, a wise, smiling judge whose "man-to-man" talks with Mickey provide some of the film's highlights. Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker, and her great dramatic role in the series, Ann Rutherford and Sara Haden all appear in their familiar characterisations. A superb drama of a condemned man, "Yo-Yo" Hamp, starring Walter Woolf King and Mona Barrie, is also being shown.

Spectacular and topical, "Women in War," which is the main attraction for the latter half of the week, has a great public appeal. With the heroic work of the "girls behind the line" as the background, the film tells a dramatic story. Wendy Barrie, arraigned for the murder of an unwelcome admirer, whose death was really the result of an accidental fall, is discharged on condition that she enrols in the Overseas Nursing Corps. And the commandant is her mother she has never known—her parents were divorced when she was a baby. That great actress, Elsie Janis, plays this mother role, a part which calls for her to be a tight-lipped, unemotional martinet. Wendy becomes enamoured with a young airman, the fiancee of one of her room mates, and the jealousy occasioned by this triangular situation intensifies the drama. Thrills galore will be found in "The Devil Pays Off," featuring J. Edward Bromberg and Osa Massen, which will also be shown.

SUSPENDED FROM HIS JOB

FOOD OFFICIAL'S TRAGIC DEATH

TROUBLES KEPT FROM WIFE

Worried because he had been suspended from his job following some minor irregularities with regard to money, Norman Claude Field, aged 34, of Chequer-lane, Ash, Ministry of Food slaughterhouse manager for the Ramsgate and Ash districts, was found dead in his gas-filled office at Winstanley-crescent, Ramsgate, last week.

Field leaves a widow and two children and at the inquest on Wednesday the Borough Coroner (Mr. J. H. Robinson) suggested that had he confided his troubles to his wife the tragedy would probably not have occurred.

Reginald William Field, of Churchstreet, Ticehurst, Sussex, a brother, identified two letters as having been written by the deceased. His brother was perfectly normal in every way and witness had not heard him threaten to take his life. At Easter when witness last saw him he said he was getting on well with his job.

Cyril Frank Danton, of Margate-road, Ramsgate, a slaughterman employed by his father, said Field had an office at his father's slaughterhouse at Winstanley-crescent.

At about 7 a.m. on Monday witness arrived at the slaughterhouse and noticed the key in the lock of the office door. Witness entered the office and saw Field lying on the floor. There was a strong smell of gas in the room. A tube leading to a gas fire had been disconnected. The loose end of the tube was lying on the floor close to Field's head. The tap was full on and gas was escaping. Witness turned the gas off at the meter and, returning to the office, came to the conclusion that Field was dead.

Cheerful Disposition.

Witness said he found on the table two envelopes, one addressed to Field's wife and one to a friend. He had known Field for 18 months and he was normally of a cheerful disposition.

Dr. A. N. Gordon, police surgeon, who was called to the slaughterhouse, said in his opinion Field had been dead for some time, probably since the previous evening. The black-out curtains had not been drawn. Death was due to coal-gas poisoning.

Edward John Payne, of Watling-street, Sidcup, county slaughtering expert for Kent for the Ministry of Food, said Field was under his supervision. He was in charge of the slaughterhouses at Ramsgate and Ash. He had been employed by the Ministry for nearly three years. Field was always a cheerful man and a good worker.

Witness said there were certain irregularities with regard to money and Field on Saturday had to go to see the Area Meat Live Stock Officer. As a result of these enquiries Field was suspended from his work.

"The irregularities were not very serious," said witness, "and could have caused a normal man to take his life."

Witness said he saw Field on Friday and told him he had been instructed to make enquiries. He had not paid over certain moneys he should have done but on the Friday night Field made out a cheque for the amounts and handed it to the people concerned.

Took It Badly.

The following day at High Wycombe, Field was interviewed by the Area Meat Live Stock Officer in witness' presence. After hearing the explanation the area officer suspended Field. Field took it rather badly. He asked to be given another chance and the area officer replied that that would have to be considered by a higher authority.

Witness said that afterwards Field seemed very worried and said he had not told his wife anything about it. Witness advised him to do so. He had never had cause to complain of Field's work.

Mrs. Lucy Field, the widow, said her husband had not been in the habit of telling her about his financial affairs, although he had asked him to.

On Saturday night he returned to Ash. He was very quiet and seemed worried. She generally asked what the children had been doing but on this occasion he did not do so. It was most unusual.

The following morning witness asked her husband what was wrong and he said he felt tired. He got up and made witness some tea as usual and left soon after nine o'clock. He said he was going to make a telephone call to Mr. Payne.

Witness expected her husband back for breakfast but he did not return and she never saw him again. She had tried to get her husband to tell her what was worrying him but he would not do so.

The Coroner said Field had written a very affectionate letter addressed to his wife and he proposed afterwards to read it to her. He intended reading only the part which would affect his judgment in the case.

Made a Mess.

The Coroner read a passage which began "I have made a mess of things again, Why, I don't know. I really thought I was better and in a way . . . People will say I am a coward to leave you like this . . . I am leaving the children behind because I know they will be a comfort to you. Why I am behaving as I do God knows."

Mrs. Robinson said it was a very affectionate and a very nice letter.

The Coroner said the second letter left by Field was addressed to Mr. Files. It began "Dear Rex. This is all too awful. Why I must go out like this I don't know. Please do what you can for my wife and two boys. I have the last two months expenses cheque. So come and that will help. Pray for me. Yours. Norman."

The Coroner said he had read the letter because it placed beyond doubt the fact that Field took his own life. He was insane at the time he took his life the balance of his mind was disturbed.

He was obviously very worried after his interview with the area officer," said the Coroner. "I think if he had told his wife about it or told any friend about his trouble he would probably not have taken his life. It was keeping it to himself and brooding upon it that made him take his life. Irregularities had been committed but it appears they were not of such a serious nature as would have resulted in him losing his position, although he probably feared it."

The Coroner expressed his sympathy with Mrs. Field and the children.

PENSIONER'S ANONYMOUS GIFT

An anonymous donation of 5s. has been received by Ramsgate General Hospital from an old-age pensioner aged 78, living at Broadstairs, who sent his gift in lieu of garden produce.

BELIEVED KILLED IN ACTION

MISSING MARGATE AIRMAN

Previously reported missing, Sgt. Air-Gnr. Edwin Charles Alfred Coules, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Coules, of 85 Glencoe-road, Margate, has now been posted as missing believed killed.

A report from the International Red Cross, quoting Berlin information, stated that Sgt. Coules was believed to have lost his life in action on 3rd September.

Nineteen years of age, Sgt. Coules took part in one of the thousand-bomber raids and had also taken part in attacks on Germany and enemy-occupied territory. He was an old Pettman Central School boy and was formerly a member of the St. Paul's Troop of Boy Scouts.

In a letter to Mr. and Mrs. Coules, Sgt. Coules' commanding officer wrote: "Your son was popular in the squadron and was fast becoming an air-gunner. He is greatly missed in the sergeants' mess and his loss is regretted by all."

COOL COURAGE

EXAMPLE WHICH WON M.C. FOR MARGATE OFFICER

"By cool control and encouragement during the retirement from Benghazi, Capt. George set an example of the highest standard, and he was very largely responsible for the successful retirement of his battery."

The above is an extract from the citation of the award of the Military Cross to Capt. Leonard Edgar George, R.A., of Margate, announced in our columns a fortnight ago.

The report of the Commander in Chief Middle East stated:

"Capt. George has continually distinguished himself and his coolness and indifference to fire is a praiseworthy example. On one occasion during the heat of an enemy attack this officer organised a flying patrol with Bren guns in an endeavour to counteract low-level dive-bombing in the target area, and on another occasion, after successfully organised a fire-fighting party which succeeded in extinguishing a large petrol dump in the vicinity of a gun site, whilst at the same time being heavily bombed."

INDULGED TOO FREELY

SPENT NIGHT ON SOFA

A plea for a soldier by a man who found him asleep in his house when he got up one morning was made at Margate Police Court on Wednesday.

Gnr. Graham Maurice Beaumont, aged 23, stationed at Broadstairs, was charged with remaining in the dwelling-house of Mr. Bilcliffe, of Canterbury-road, Margate, where he saw defendant detained by Mr. George Bilcliffe, the occupier, who told him that he had gone downstairs and found the man asleep on the sofa. He did not know him and had no right to be there. When asked by witness for an explanation, defendant said "I left Dreamland rather late and, dopey, and felt that I had had about half-past ten sick night with the intention of walking to my unit at Broadstairs. I had had enough to drink that way. I found the back door open so I entered and went to sleep." In reply to the charge defendant said "I did not enter with the intention of stealing."

On Wednesday Mr. Bilcliffe told the magistrates that he went to bed about 9.30 p.m. on Saturday, leaving the back door bolted, and dopey, and smelt strongly of drink. Nothing was missing from the house.

"As soon as I entered no harm in any way," added witness, "I hope you will deal as leniently as possible with him."

Beaumont said he had too much drink the night before and did not know what he was doing.

The Mayor (Alderman G. P. Hoare) announced that the charge would be dismissed on payment of £1 2s. 6d. costs.

"It is very obvious," he said, addressing defendant, "that you indulged rather too freely. Since you did not enter the premises with any criminal intent you will be let off with a caution."

ALTERED RAILWAY TICKET

SOLDIER FINED

Cpl. Albert Edward Inns, aged 26, pleaded guilty at Margate police court on Wednesday to travelling on the Southern Railway on 25th June without having paid the fare and with intent to avoid payment.

There was a second summons for buying a ticket from a person who was not an authorised servant or agent of the railway company.

Mr. Hamilton, for the railway company, Mr. J. H. Jones said defendant was travelling in a train from Margate to Ramsgate. At the time he started the journey was asked by a collector for his ticket. He produced a Government warrant. He said he was going on leave. The date had been altered from 1st May to 31st May, and the destination was originally Deal but had been changed to London. Asked how he obtained it, he said he had bought it for 5s. Such tickets were sent by the railway company to Army units and issued from the soldiers' rooms. Defendant would not say from whom he obtained the ticket.

Investigations by the solicitor's statement and said when the ticket inspector told him the ticket was no use he offered to pay the fare.

An officer from defendant's unit said a military investigation had been taking place to ascertain how defendant obtained the ticket. There were military charges against him. He had been in the Army two years and his record was good.

The magistrates imposed fines of £1 on each of the two summonses.

RHAPSODY

Seldom, if ever, has Ramsgate witnessed at the end of the summer season so imposing a ceremonial as that on Thursday. Already settling down to the somewhat dull routine of winter months, the good old town was aroused to unwonted gaiety and excitement consequent upon the taking possession of a public park second to none in the United Kingdom. Although by no means a large demesne so far as such things go nowadays, the 12 compact acres comprised in Ellington Park present-quite as varied and pretty bits of scenery as can be met with anywhere. Encircled on all sides by a belt of grand old trees, we have here undulating greensward, lovely forest glades in miniature, and cosy nooks among the abundant shrubbery guard every one of which the procession which extended to about a mile in length and included representatives of all the important public bodies in the town. At two o'clock most of the places of business in the town were closed and large crowds of people made their way to the pier yard, where an interesting half-hour was passed in watching the marshalling of the troops. Along the entire route many thousands of towns-people and visitors had gathered, and despite an occasional shower of rain the procession looked extremely well. The crowd was especially dense at the triumphal arch erected at the top of High-street and from that point to the gates of the park. A Salvation Army officer who occupied a carriage along with a St. Lawrence band-master was awarded the D.C.M. His home is at 12 Cumberland-road, Ramsgate. He enjoys the distinction of having been brought after being wounded by a German soldier, who accompanied him into the British lines and surrendered.

STOLEN NETS

On Saturday the mackerel boat "Who would have thought it?" arrived in Ramsgate Harbour and the master (Kelly) reported the loss of 12 nets. They are believed to have been stolen by a French fishing boat, the name of which is unknown, hailing from Boulogne. On Thursday the General Gordon arrived with the loss of several nets supposed to have been stolen by French fishermen.

'HOW GREEN WAS MY VALLEY'

ACADEMY WINNER AT ODEON

Patrons of the Odeon Cinema, Ramsgate, have a great treat in store for them this week.

George Raft and Pat O'Brien are co-starred in "Broadway," chief feature to-day (Tuesday) and to-morrow. Surprising elements primarily involved in the film are its treatment as a biography of Raft and its skilful presentation as such. In achieving the end Raft is introduced as himself, the film star, in early passages of the film. The story then cuts back dramatically to the "roaring 20's," to deal specifically with the play that was "Broadway," the stage hit. Raft is given an opportunity to display his dancing talents primarily in two numbers, the Charleston and a tango, both romantic lead is capably played by Janet Blair. Also being shown is "Almost Married," with Jane Frazee and Robert Paige.

The tuneful Award winner, "How Green Was My Valley," heads the bill for the latter part of the week. This is the hard story of a Welsh family never conquered—not by hardship, hunger or poverty—but by the turbulent years that stole the greenness from their valley. A great book brought faithfully to the screen, it has captured with honesty and strength all the wonderful characterization of every day life in its vivid scenes, such as the wedding celebrations, or the Welsh miners marching home from their daily work in the coal pits; the power of its drama, as when the preacher denounces the hypocrisy of the villagers; and its haunting charm, as when a young boy is given faith and courage to walk once again. This cast is uncommonly perfect, starring Walter Pidgeon, Maureen O'Hara, Donald Crisp, Anna Lee and Roddy McDowall.

TWO KILLED

RAMSGATE VICTIMS OF S.E. RAID

Two Ramsgate men were killed during an air raid on a south-east district on Tuesday.

They were Henry Albert Britton, of 43 Dumpton Park-road, and Frederick Arthur Merrall, of 81 Winstanley-crescent.

Employed by Messrs. Grummant Bros., of Grange-road Ramsgate, Mr. Britton was 44 years of age and during the last war, while serving with the Queen's Regiment, he lost his right eye.

He leaves a widow and an adopted daughter to mourn their loss.

Mr. Merrall was 34 years of age and was employed as a driver by Messrs. Hodgman, of King-street, Ramsgate. A member of the company (Ramsgate) Home Guard, he leaves a widow and two children aged nine years and nine months.

THREE-MINUTE MEETING

RAMSGATE COUNCIL SILENCE

The members apparently having exhausted themselves at the two-hour private meeting the previous week, Thursday's monthly meeting of Ramsgate Town Council was one of the shortest on record.

The whole of the public business was transacted in under three minutes.

During this time the reports of 11 committee meetings were adopted and there was not a comment on any item in any one of them.

HOT DRINKS FOR HOME GUARD

USEFUL EXPERIENCE FOR W.V.S.

The report of the Civil Defence Committee, presented at a meeting of Ramsgate Town Council on Thursday, stated that the Town Clerk reported that from time to time applications were received from military commanders for the supply of refreshments to troops on special work in outlying positions and that recently a suggestion had been received from the Medical Officer of the Home Guard that a mobile canteen might be used to supply hot refreshments at night to units of the Home Guard serving in exposed positions.

The committee feel that every effort should be made to comply with such requests," stated the report, "and feel that the use of the canteen for such purposes would provide useful experience to the ladies of the W.V.S. who have undertaken to operate the canteen after enemy air raids."

The committee recommended that the canteen be used for the purposes mentioned and that the W.V.S. be asked to provide volunteers to operate it on such occasions.

The recommendation was adopted.

DEPLETED STAFF

BROADSTAIRS COUNCIL DIFFICULTY

Like most local authorities, Broadstairs Council is severely depleted in carrying on its services owing to the number of men who have been and are being called up for the Forces or other war work.

In a report to the General Purposes Committee of the Council the Surveyor (Mr. W. Richardson) stated:

"I desire to call the committee's attention to the demands being made on the Council for the release of manual employees by the Ministry of Labour and National Service.

Monday last took the only two bricklayers and carpenters which I had, although fortunately a bricklayer (Jones) has returned as he failed to pass the medical test. On the 17th September I lost my plumber (Cutler). On the same day I received from the Ramsgate branch of the Ministry of Labour a request for the transfer of a further eight men, including a charge hand (C. King), a roof spotter (F. Richford) and one other slater (V. F. Richford). Of these men C. King, J. Bing and V. Richford are members of the Council's emergency squad, and E. Miller, C. Nutting (roof spotter) and W. Laslett are members of the road repairs squad, and if they are taken I do not see how I am to replace them.

"If the Council is assuming such proportions I thought it advisable to ask the committee's instructions as to the procedure to be followed."

The report of the General Purposes Committee, submitted as a meeting of the Council on Monday, stated that the Surveyor was directed to represent to the Ministry of Labour and National Service that King, Lowing, Bing, Miller and Nutting should not be required to be released from the emergency squad, but not to submit any representations to the Ministry in the case of Richford and Jones.

The report was adopted without comment.

"If you're over in Montreal pop in and see my sister," said Mrs. Atkins, of the Freemasons' Tavern, Ramsgate, to Mr. Jack Taylor, of Meeting-street, who is serving in the Merchant Navy. Mr. Taylor was in Montreal recently and he received a royal welcome at the home of Mrs. Irene Moon. "Although, as he says, he had a "tough time" finding the house—3481 Park-avenue—it was well worth the trouble as he had a wonderful time. One night he was with two London men watching a parade of soldiers in Park-avenue when Mrs. Moon and her husband came along and again took them to the flat. Beer was ordered and the lads settled down to a grand party, and yet again, when he and a mate went there to tea, they found an enormous spread of peaches, grapes, apples, tons" of ham and other good fare—and the inevitable crate of beer. Hanging in the round room were pictures of Ramsgate which made Jack feel at home. Mrs. Moon longs to return to Ramsgate and misses most of all the sea air. for Montreal is 600 miles from the coast.

Tel. Jack Moses, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Moses, of the Homestead Furnishing Stores, Belleverue-road, Ramsgate, who has been in the Royal Navy just over two years, celebrates his 30th birthday to-morrow and is shortly expected home on leave. Fayter recently wrote suggesting his fellow police officers might like to contribute to a fund to provide sports gear for the men serving on his ship. The sum of 25s. has been forwarded to Lt. VERSATILE FIREMEN

ENTERTAIN AT ODEON

More familiar to Ramsgate people touring the town on their grey Bristol Fire Engine, it was a change against a more colourful background on Friday when their band appeared on the stage of the Odeon Cinema.

Staged between the evening film presentations, the 40-minute show had plenty of "pep" in it and the full house gave the entertainers a great ovation. It will probably not be long before they are seen on the Odeon stage again.

Brightly compered by Petty Principal, column officer of the division, who introduced the band as "out of his men in a good-humoured way, the show included concerted items, solos (drums) and vocal solos by talented singers.

The band consisted of Bill Maxted, Alf Challenger, known as "Hank" Evans (accordeons), Harold Oliver and Jack Odie (saxophones), Charlie Walkley (drums) and Ron Welch (piano).

As an appropriate opening the band paid their own tribute to members of the fighting services by presenting an Army, Navy and Air Force medley, and Fred Wood, the bandleader, came to the stage to sing "For you alone," accompanied at the piano by his wife, Evelyne Hunt and her band. "Fireman Boys," George Marley and Harry Woodlands brought to the audience a touch of Gilbert and Sullivan in their harmonious "hill-billy" songs. In addition to his efforts on the saxophone, Alf Challenger proved himself an able exponent on the violin in Hungarian music, accompanied by Hank Evans and the band, and rounded off the performance with a selection of popular modern numbers, Fred Wood singing "Deep in the heart of Texas."

On the conclusion of the show Mr. R. N. Paterson, manager of the Odeon, asked the patrons how they had enjoyed the show and their cheers in a round of roaring applause.

Another popular guest night performance will be presented on Friday.

REVISING PENSIONS

The Watch Committee of Ramsgate Town Council have expressed the view that the time has arrived when police and service pensions awarded prior to the outbreak of war should be increased to meet the increased cost of living, the amount of such increase being adjusted from time to time as the cost of living varies.

On the recommendation of the committee the Council have decided to ask the Association of Municipal Corporations to support this view and to make appropriate recommendations to the Government on the subject.

ON BEING FREE FROM EVERYTHING

THE BETTER LIFE

By LYNN DOYLE

I have an old farmer acquaintance in the north of Ireland who is something of a philosopher. I listen to the old man's sayings with attention and sometimes shape my course by them.

Turning to him in this time of privation and worry I bethought myself of one: "There's harm in everything, if you got too much of it." And isn't that sure? It's a modern version of the old Greek aphorism: "The thing that you love shall destroy you in the end." You can get too much of everything. Too much food, too much drink, too much money; too much of things that believe unmixed good, too much success, too much pity, too much love. Life can be made too easy for us and when that happens we are no longer able to live. Our only hope is to be made to struggle for our lives again. We can have too much peace, till we end by esteeming ourselves so precious that we can love no one else. We can have too much food, as our stomachs will soon make us aware. Our consciences suffer by that, too. The man who makes an idol of eating does not often remember his hungry fellow-creatures. Even a tea-bibber has something to say about the burdensome superfluity of drink; though I fail it hard to believe that there could have too much fine Bordeaux of a good year. Anyway, he can't have too much nowadays.

Too Kind.

The world has been too kind to the British people of the last generation or so. Their hearts have been hardened, and their bodies have become too soft. They had—till the war—become wasteful, taken their prosperity for the work of their own hands and, without knowing it, adopted that delusion of being so chosen nation that the Germans have accused us of adopting. We took for granted, evidently in the hope of finding lost golf balls, I confess that at first I thought the act an impertinence of one holiday afternoon, and smiled with national self-complacency. Now that I come to myself, "would be above such thriftiness."

And then upon my eyes were opened. I saw that these folk were citizens of a small nation with little manufacturing but much mineral wealth, forced by their geographical situation to spend the greater proportion of their income on armaments; and that if they did not learn thrifty habits they could not exist at all. I saw, too, that our fabulous richness of expenditure was due to a plenty thrust upon us by the enterprise and perhaps rapacity of our forefathers, and not to our superior greatness of soul. The truth of my old friend's saying came home more poignantly than ever before. I saw that we might be none the worse for the present reduction of our overabundant blessings.

Nearer to Nature.

Then aren't we the better for having fewer motors on the roads; for being obliged to cycle and to walk; for seeing the country again in its myriad moods; for knowing the seasons by the stars, and the time by the sun; for walking in the great procession of the year; for knowing the passing of the year by lark, and peewit, and tern, and wheatear; or by celandine, and hearthsease, and wild thyme, and sloe-berry; instead of sitting in an airless box while the world whisks by us in a series of partly coloured haze? And hasn't the pedestrian his dividend of these blessings? It was my old country friend aforesaid who thanked his Maker that if you were knocked down on the roads nowadays, at any rate the cyclists got the worst of it.

If we have fewer buses and trains, we have fewer cars on the roads; but we do use our neighbours are our friends again. We play cards with them once more, and exchange for walks together. We attend the local picture-house. We are, in short, once more citizens of our own town. I myself am rubbing up my sight-singing, and propose to sing glees in the coming winter if eye on the ball, that is. My left thumb-nail, I may say, is nearly grown again. I bring my wife up her early cup of tea, or she mine most of it; and am a better husband to her, She, on her part, is more observing of me and has lost weight by doing housework, as I diplomatically point out to her. If our former riches left us poorer, we are a lot of money at other work, needs a handy man and wife after the war. we shall be quite content to take the job.

Finally—and perhaps it is the greatest boon that war conditions have brought us—when I see a train stooping to pack up a cigarette-end, I realise that I am his fellow-creature. Will the change of heart continue after the war? Alas, no. We are selfish beings, and forget quickly. But let us try to keep some of it.

TOWN PAYS TRIBUTE

FUNERAL OF CAPT. M. C. C. DANIEL

Representatives of many sections of the community paid the last tribute to the memory of the late Capt. M. C. C. Daniel when, following cremation at Golders Green, his ashes were interred at Ramsgate Cemetery on Tuesday.

The service was conducted by the Vicar of Ramsgate (Rev. C. R. Farnsworth).

Those in attendance at the graveside included the Town Clerk (Mr. H. G. Curtis), Mr. John H. Robinson, Mr. E. C. Allfree, Mr. Terence Robinson, Mr. C. C. Maughan, the Chief Constable (Mr. S. F. A Living Memory.

Mr. W. J. Martin-Tomson contributes the following appreciation:

May I add a word to the messages of deep sympathy sent to Mrs. Daniel, which you have published? His death has robbed us of a true and loyal friend. When I looked more closely I saw that they were walking in line up and down a path in front of the house and, evidently in the hope of finding lost golf balls. I confess that at first I thought the act an impertinence of one holiday afternoon, and smiled with national self-complacency. Now that I come to myself, "would be above such thriftiness."

And then upon my eyes were opened. I saw that these folk were citizens of a small nation with little manufacturing but much mineral wealth, forced by their geographical situation to spend the greater proportion of their income on armaments; and that if they did not learn thrifty habits they could not exist at all. I saw, too, that our fabulous richness of expenditure was due to a plenty thrust upon us by the enterprise and perhaps rapacity of our forefathers, and not to our superior greatness of soul. The truth of my old friend's saying came home more poignantly than ever before. I saw that we might be none the worse for the present reduction of our overabundant blessings.

Nearer to Nature.

Then aren't we the better for having fewer motors on the roads; for being obliged to cycle and to walk; for seeing the country again in its myriad moods; for knowing the seasons by the stars, and the time by the sun; for walking in the great procession of the year; for knowing the passing of the year by lark, and peewit, and tern, and wheatear; or by celandine, and hearthsease, and wild thyme, and sloe-berry; instead of sitting in an airless box while the world whisks by us in a series of partly coloured haze? And hasn't the pedestrian his dividend of these blessings? It was my old country friend aforesaid who thanked his Maker that if you were knocked down on the roads nowadays, at any rate the cyclists got the worst of it."

If we have fewer buses and trains, we have fewer cars on the roads; but we do use our neighbours are our friends again. We play cards with them once more, and exchange for walks together. We attend the local picture-house. We are, in short, once more citizens of our own town. I myself am rubbing up my sight-singing, and propose to sing glees in the coming winter if eye on the ball, that is. My left thumb-nail, I may say, is nearly grown again. I bring my wife up her early cup of tea, or she mine most of it; and am a better husband to her, She, on her part, is more observing of me and has lost weight by doing housework, as I diplomatically point out to her. If our former riches left us poorer, we are a lot of money at other work, needs a handy man and wife after the war. we shall be quite content to take the job.

Finally—and perhaps it is the greatest boon that war conditions have brought us—when I see a train stooping to pack up a cigarette-end, I realise that I am his fellow-creature. Will the change of heart continue after the war? Alas, no. We are selfish beings, and forget quickly. But let us try to keep some of it.
